The regiment was changed to the 8th Heavy Artillery, in the Winter of 1862–1863, while stationed at Baltimore, Md. He was with his regiment, and doing duty the whole time, without sickness or wounds, till mustered out at Bailey's Cross Roads, Va., 21 June 1865. He took part in the battles of Spottsylvania, Cold Harbor, and Petersburgh, 16–22 June 1864, and in nearly all the battles about Petersburgh, till the close of the war.

At the battle of Cold Harbor, their Colonel, Peter A. Porter, was killed while leading his regiment against the enemy's works; and his body remained where he fell, until recovered by a party of five men who volunteered for that purpose, to wit: "Lieut. (then Sergeant) Leroy Williams, of Batavia, N. Y.; and privates Glen S. Hicks, of Lima, N. Y.; John Morris Duff, of Albion, N. Y.; Samuel Traviss, of Lockport, N. Y.; and Walter Harwood, of Baltimore." They each received from the Century Club of

New York City, a medal of solid gold, about two inches in diameter. The one presented to Mr. Duff bore the following inscription:

"A Tribute of 'THE CENTURY' to PRIVATE JOHN DUFF,
For a [illegible] of heroic devotion,
in rescuing the body of
COLONEL PETER A. PORTER,
8th New York Cavalry,
From under the guns of the enemy,
Cold Harbor, June 3, 1864."

The reverse represents soldiers in the act of bearing the body of a fallen comrade from the field of battle.

Each medal was accompanied by the following letter:

"Century Rooms, June 3, 1865.

"To Private JOHN MORRIS DUFF, Eighth Regiment New York Artillery:

"'The Century,' an association of the literary men and artists of New York, admiring whatever is noble in character or action, has caused this medal to be prepared and presented to you.

"Colonel Peter A. Porter, your late commander, our associate, was respected by us for his manly qualities, loved for his kindness and accomplishments, and lamented for his untimely but glorious death.

"Your bravery and devotion in bringing his body from under the enemy's guns to an honorable grave, have won our admiration and gratitude.

"We present this medal as a testimonial to you and your posterity, of the honor in which courage in the discharge of duty is held by all men.

"GEORGE BANCROFT, President.

"AUGUSTUS R. MACDONOUGH, Secretary."

General Hancock, who was selected to present the medals, said:

"It is a source of infinite gratification to me that I have been selected by 'The Century' to present you each with a golden medal, commemorative of the heroism displayed by you in rescuing from the sanguinary battle-field of Cold Harbor the body of your gallant and distinguished commander, Col. P. A. Porter, of the 8th New York Heavy Artillery, who had been killed while intrepidly leading his regiment to the charge against the enemy's works. This noble action was voluntarily performed by you under the close and deadly fire of the enemy, at the utmost peril of your lives.

"I then had the honor to command the 2d Army Corps, to which your gallant regiment was attached; and I know full well the dangers attending the valorous deed, in the performance of which you exhibited the noblest qualities of the soldier. The records of battles scarcely present an instance in which assaulting columns approached so close to the enemy as did ours at Cold Harbor, without complete success; and probably not one in which the brave assailants held so tenaciously and defiantly the ground they had gained; nor one in which it was more hazardous to perform the chivalrous act, in commemoration of which these chaste and beautiful medals have been struck. They are appropriate rewards for your fearless valor and devotion, and are worthy of 'The Century' and the occasion which called them forth. They should be preserved and transmitted by each of you, as a high and priceless honor.

"For your devotion to your Colonel, and for your heroic services in rescuing his body from under the guns of the enemy, accept the thanks of his relatives and friends; and accept these medals from the 'Century Club' as testimonials of their high appreciation of Colonel Porter's character, and of your bold achievement in the hazardous enterprise. Keep them while you live, and transmit them to your children, to be preserved as a memorial of those services."

[1] The following account of the festivities at the house of Thaddeus Seymour St. John, on the hundredth anniversary of his father's birth, has been thought worthy of preservation:

WALTON, Delaware County, N. Y., June 6.—Mr. Cook St. John celebrated his one hundredth birthday at the house of T. S. St. John in this village, on Tuesday, June 3, with his descendants to the fifth generation around him. The sight at the dinner was a beautiful one. The white-haired centenarian was surrounded by scores of his descendants, whose ages ranged from two years to eighty-three. The company numbered 111. On the green surrounding the house a temporary dining room was prepared, decorated with evergreens and screened by the American flag, on which were the figures 1873 in laurel leaves. The aged patriarch occupied the centre of a long table, with a face beaming with pleasure. At his right and left were branches of his family tree down to the fifth generation. In front of him was the cake nearly three feet in diameter and a half feet high, consisting of laurel leaves, and decorated with 100 different varieties of flowers. After the dinner Mr. St. John retired to take his usual nap, telling the children that he would return and indulge in a frolic on the green with them.

The Rev. Mr. Pattengill, in addressing the company, said: "Mr. St. John once remarked to me: 'I lived with my first wife seven years, with my second wife fifty years, and with my daughter-in-law over twenty years, without receiving an unkind word.'"—New York Sun, June 8, 1873.

Y., where he was born 27 Sept. 1823. The Mudge Memorial, pp. 159–60, says of him: "He resided with his father until his eighteenth year, when, prompted by a desire to preach the gospel, he went to reside with his brother, Colby, in the town of Kendall, Orleans Co., N. Y. Here he attended a select school two years, during which time he made a profession of religion; after which he entered Hamilton Theological Seminary, which, while he remained there, became Madison University. After three years' study, he began to preach, and was ordained as pastor of the First Baptist Church in Kendall, March 22, 1849, and remained its pastor till Jan. 8, 1851, when he was appointed missionary to the district of Tonawanda, N. Y. His health failing him, he resigned this charge the first year, and afterward preached in the town of Carlton, N. Y., [from March 1852 till Nov. 1853]; then in the town of Horse Heads, Chemung Co., where he preached four years, during which time he baptized nearly one hundred converts. Receiving a call from the Baptist church in Palmyra, he entered upon that pastorate in 1855 [should be 1857], and preached here five years, and baptized nearly one hundred more. On the breaking out of the Southern Rebellion, induced by patriotic motives, he resigned his charge and entered the army as chaplain of the 138th Regiment of N. Y. Volunteers, September 1861, and served upwards of two years; was discharged on account of his health, and returned to Palmyra, where he resided on his farm till February 1866, when he sold it, and removed to the town of Wilson, Niagara Co., N. Y., where he now resides as pastor of the Baptist church." In 1870, they moved from Wilson to Nunda, N. Y.; and in 1873, to Olean, N. Y., where he was pastor of the Baptist Church in Feb. 1875.
